About NVQs

National Vocational Qualifications (NVQs) are, as the name suggests, vocational qualifications and allow goods drivers to demonstrate their competence in their own field of professionalism. Assessments are carried out in the workplace while the candidate carries out their normal daily duties. In driving disciplines the assessor will accompany the driver in their own vehicle. We also have a fleet of training vehicles available if any further training needs are identified.

The standards for NVQs are set by the sector skills council for transport and logistics, Skills for Logistics. These 'standards' encompass all aspects of the jobs of most LGV and van drivers and includes areas not regularly covered including accident procedures, dealing with emergency situations and how to effectively deal with customers, especially when things go wrong.

Driver Benefits

There are many advantages to drivers achieving an NVQ. It gives you the chance to show that you can carry out all aspects of your job to a set national standard. You will get a nationally recognised NVQ certificate to prove what you have done. If you have not undergone any formal driving tests in the past, the assessments conducted for the NVQ will give you a real sense of where you are at. Even if you have sat formal tests for goods vehicles some time ago, this could act as a refresher.

There is a great deal of pressure to reduce our impact on the environment and with the cost of fuel continuously rising, your assessment may help to identify any areas where you can help to make a difference.

All our assessors are qualified and experienced and can help you to be the best at what you do and supply you with the advice and guidance you need to progress further if you want to.
